MESSAGE

I have immense pleasure in congratulating the graduates of the Central Tribal University of Andhra Pradesh. The Convocation ceremony is a manifestation of the power of education and emphasises the State's determination to ensure wider access to education for all, especially the tribals, whose talent and ambition are beginning to find expression.

This university has been seen as a huge leap towards inclusive development, as opportunities will now be available in areas where there were none before. Today, you have graduated into an environment where everything is evolving rapidly due to artificial intelligence and digital technology. In this regard, the Government of Andhra Pradesh has made significant investments in skill development and innovation ecosystems to prepare young people for change.

"India's demographic advantage can yield results only if young people are equipped with skills aligned to emerging technologies and they will to use those skills in the service of a larger purpose."

With opportunity comes responsibility. Climate change, technological disruptions, and socio-economic disparities call for informed, responsive, and ethical leaders. It is my plea to you all to continue learning throughout your lives, be honest and principled, and use your knowledge to promote inclusive growth. Maintain the values instilled within you by your community while participating fully in global initiatives. Andhra Pradesh's success rests on individuals like yourselves who are capable and ready to create and innovate.

MESSAGE

It is a matter of deep institutional pride to address you on the occasion of the First Convocation of the Central Tribal University of Andhra Pradesh. As a Chancellor of the University, I have witnessed the institution's development as an epitome of learning and change, contributing to its core mandate of providing quality, open, and equitable higher education.

Conceived with the intention of serving the nation in its mission, the university aims to offer education to tribals and to integrate their unique knowledge systems with modern fields of study. The institution CTUAP has, in a short time, established programs in the sciences, social sciences, and management disciplines, along with research activities. The university's students are mostly first-generation students.

"An institution serves its highest purpose when it transforms not just the mind, but the destiny of those it educates and the communities they serve."

In a rapidly changing global context marked by technological disruption and social challenges, universities must cultivate not only knowledge but also responsible and ethical application. CTUAP's emphasis on academia-government-industry collaboration is therefore critical to national development. To the graduating students: your degree represents both achievement and responsibility. Uphold integrity, pursue lifelong learning, and apply your education with purpose and humility in the service of society.

MESSAGE

Born into a deprived tribal family in Koppal district of Karnataka, I have lived the very journey that this university was created to make possible. When I was appointed as the first Vice-Chancellor of the Central Tribal University of Andhra Pradesh in August 2020, I inherited not a built institution but a sacred mandate to light the lamp of quality higher education in the lives of tribal communities who have, for too long, stood at the margins of India's academic landscape.

We began from a transit campus with nascent resources, yet with an unshakeable conviction: that talent is universal, even if opportunity is not. I consider myself fortunate to have received the blessings and guidance of Smt. Droupadi Murmu Ji, Hon'ble President of India. Her unwavering support for education, tribal empowerment, and inclusive development has been a constant source of inspiration in the journey of establishing and nurturing this University. I also gratefully acknowledge the highest level of support and encouragement received from Shri Dharmendra Pradhan Ji, Hon'ble Minister of Education, Government of India. His guidance and unwavering support have been instrumental in our endeavors.

This Convocation is not merely a ceremony, it is justice, made visible. I urge each graduate to carry your rootedness forward your tribal identity, your mother tongue, your community's values are not things to be left behind in the pursuit of success; they are the very foundation upon which a genuinely original contribution to India and to the world must be built.

"The roots of a tree do not diminish when the tree grows tall. They grow deeper, stronger, and more far-reaching. Be deeply rooted in who you are, and you will grow as tall as your dreams allow."

To my dear students, I taught throughout my life that one must work not to satisfy others, but to satisfy oneself, for it is that inner compulsion toward excellence that produces the most enduring achievement. You have studied, persevered, and graduated from a young institution that was still finding its feet, and in doing so, you have helped this university find them faster. Now go forth and reach back mentor those who are still climbing, return to your communities with competence and compassion, and let your education be not a private asset but a public service. CTUAP's permanent campus is rising; its research culture is deepening; its reputation is growing. But its greatest ambassadors are you. Go and make your families proud, your communities stronger, and our nation grateful.
